Florida Reports Heavy Turnout In Primary Vote

By George Lardner Jr.

MIAMI, Marth 14 (WP).—More than two million Democrats and Propublicans voted in Florida's 14-candidate prumary today as Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D. Maine, clang to hopes of keeping his national stature untarnished.

An unusually large turnout of 70 percent of the state's voters, sparred by the usues of school busing and school prayer, was precicled by Secretary of State Richard Stone. The carry turnout was reported to be heav, in some areas, with up to 50 voters waiting to

India Reports It Is Holding 73,944 Pakistanis as POWs

NEW DELHI, March 14 (AP). -The Indian Defense Ministry told Parliament today that 73,944 Pakistani soldiers are being detained in 50 prisoner-of-war camps at a monthly cost to the government of 6.5 million rupees -almost $500,000

Defense Minister Jagjivan Ram said in response to other questions that Indian casualties in last December's two-week war included 3,471 killed, 8,548 wouoded and 325 missing and that sporadic violations of the Dec. 17 ceasefire are still occurring along the western front. Almost all the Pakistani prisoners belonged to the partisons inside East Pakistan which were surrendered oo Dec. 16, eliminating Islamabad's control over what is now Bangladesh.

Mr. Ram told the Rajya Sabha, the upper house of Parliament, that Iodh is speoding 5.146 mil-lion rupees a month—$704,930 on food for the prisoners and 1.417 million rupees—$194,110—for advance pay under the Geneva Convention of 1949. The salaries, he said, will be reimbursed by the Pakistan government when the prisoners are repetriated.
In addition to the military prisoners, a Defense Ministry spokesman said, the Indians also are responsible for around 20,000 paramilitary and civilian prisoners taken in East Pakistan. The Bangladesh government plans to try some of these for collaboration under its laws.

Mr. Ram said Indian losses also Included 73 tanks, 45 aircraft and

Wilson Returns

Former Prime Minister Harold Wilson returned from talks with political leaders in Dublin to press the British government for urgeot peace moves to forestall civil war. Mr. Wilson's Duhlin initiative drew an irate attack from Northern Ireland's prime minister, Brian Faulkner, who said in a statement: "The people of Northern Ireland and the Army of the United Elugdom are engaged here in a life and death struggle for the survival of democratio life. I, believe they have the right, in this critical altuation, to expect responsible support from political leaders."

Mr. Wilson reported on arriving at London Airport: "Anyone with any duty in the British everything to their power to try to understand the situation and try to help find a way of re-conciliation." He told newsmen he was seeking early talks either with Prime Minister Edward Heath or Home Secretary Reginald Maudling to put forward his views on a peace offensive. He conferred in Dublin with

Congress Party Obtains Majority In West Bengal

NEW DELHI, March 14 (UPI). Prime Minister Iodira Gandhi's ruling Congress party today recaptured the state of West Bengal after a lapse of five years. The state had been regarded as a stronghold of the extremist Communist party-Marxist (CPM).

Maintaining its winning spree. the Congress party secured a majority of 26, with 166 seats in the 230-member West Bengal Assembly. The Marxists, who bad promised a tough electoral battle, were far down on the score board with only five seats

Busing Condemned

Late in the final session, a resolution was passed condemning busing as a means to achieve racial integration in public schools. Some delegates walked out to protest what they called

"a return to segregation."
Roy Innis, director of CORE, immediately told newsmen that this had been a CORE effort. Within minutes another resolution was passed calling for the "dismantling of Israel" and the support of Arab interests in the Middle East.

It seemed to close observers that neither resolution would have passed early in the session, when close to full delegations were on hand, since many of the elected officials are committed to school integration and many in Northern urban centers work closely with American Jews, In addition, while some nationalist groups are opposed to busing and integration, they have been careful not to offend the Jewish community, which has made financial contributions to their organiza-

SAN DIEGO, Calif., March 14 (AP).-Gigt, the only California gray whale in captivity, went back to the sea yes-terday carrying a package of scientific instruments after spending all but a few weeks of her coe-year-long life in a marine amusement park. The seven-tin, 27-foot whale had been studied by scientists

But under the terms of her capture, the U.S. Department of the Interior ruled that she could be kept for only a year, The 14-pound package of instruments mounted on a platform was attached to her by four sutures. The instruments are expected to emit racio signals that tell Gigi's whereabouts

The sutures are supposed to deteriorate after nine months, allowing scientists to recover the floating instrument package to determine how she adapted to the sea. Loaded Oolo Barge

Vitamin E Takes Over From C As Top U.S. Health Food Fad

By Nancy L. Ross

WASHINGTON, March 14 tonnage or dollars, Bulk sales (WP).-It is said to be effective of vitamin E in this country in treating beet diseases in turkeys, a hemolytic type of anemia in small infants and occturnal leg cramps. Some proponents go further and claim it does everything from preventing indolent uicers to keeping the heart healthy to combatting the effects of smog. Others insist with equal vehemence it doeso't do a thing

It is vitamin E, the latest fad in alphabet nostrums. But the above-mentioned ills can hardly account for the current boom in sales which some industry sources report are up 500 percent over last year. Now medical evidence aride, the grapevine has it that vitamin E improves or sustains sexual prowess. Scarcely more than a year ago,

Linus Pauling's little book made millions of people swallow vitamin C for the common cold. In more recent months, the public has been hailing E for energy or elixir. India and Bangladesh

The Indian troops have left Bangladesh and returned to a homeland which their victory has revivified. Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's New Congress party not so long ago seemed a fragile plant, struggling to survive in a veritable jungle of parties and cliques, of old ways and old men, and new, thrusting radicals; of provinces rent by linguistle nationalisms and burdened by India's omnipresent poverty. Now it is triumphing across the nation. Even in strife-torn Bengal. For the first time since the initial euphoria of independence and the long struggle for it gave Mrs. Gandhi's father. Jawaharlai Nehru, and the original Congress party a temporary national character and authority, India seems likely to have a genuinely popular government.

That 'his outcome, like Blsmarck's power in Prussla, is due to a briskly successful war seems unquestionable. But that India, under Mrs. Gandhi, will follow the Bismarckian road of conservative militarism, with some sops thrown to social welfare, is quite improbable. For one thing, Bismarck's German federation had a single language (admittedly with marked dialectic variations and with some French and Polish on the fringes), only two state religions, and a reasonably homogeneous culture. For another, that Germany was highly viable, economically. Polyglot, multi-racial India, with its superabundance of religious experience and cultural differences and its basic economic difficulties, is quite another matter. It is doubtful that Mrs. Gandhi could build a nation around an army if she would-and all her ideology is opposed to such an attempt.

Mrs. Gandhi, in fact, has won a mandate to take on one of the most difficult jobs of government in today's world. One of the very few that is obviously more difficult is that left behind by the departing Indian troops in Bangladesh. Here, Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman must prove to his people that their fresh-won freedom is not simply the freedom to starve spectacularly-and he cannot do that unalded. Help is going to Bangladesh, but apparently too slowly to show very concrete results. It must be increased, and speeded up, by the world

For the United States this implies, among other things, recognition of Bangladesh. The departure of the Indian troops removes one obstacle to such recognition, and while it is far from certain that Bangladesh has a government that will endure, or even a state, Its future very obviously does not lie with Pakistan. American recognition may not make much difference in the strained relations with India-Mrs. Gandhi has talked, during her campalgn, of a Sino-American plot against Indian Kashmir, and she is not likely to surrender so useful a ploy. That her remarks about Kashmir reflect the burden which that Muslim province has been on India's conscience is quite possible; in any event, the Kashmir problem seems no closer to solution. The United States should recognize Bangladesh, not with any idea of placating New Delhi, but simply to expedite the kind of humanitarian aid which alone seams likely to prevent another explosion in

Oil Breakthrough in Beirut

Agreement by the Arablan American Oil Co. to sell Saudi Arabia a 20 percent stake in ownership of Aramco's Saudi operations marks a major new stage in efforts of commodity producers, especially the producers of oil, to gain control over their own wealth and destiny. Aramco, which is owned by four American companies, is the largest oil consortium in the world. Its decision to yield to Saudi pressures for "participation" is sure to influence other companies operating in Saudi Arabia and elsewhere.

Clearly, the oil-producing states are no longer content merely to collect taxes on business operations conducted by foreigners on their territory. They want to own and operate these businesses. The foreign companies' expertise and, especially, their controi of marketing outlets assure them considerable continuing leverage. It is inconceivable that Saudi Arabia can consume any significant proportion of the oil it produces. But the trend is clear. Last year the oil states made a breakthrough on price; this year the breakthrough is on "participation."

Behind this trend, of course, is not only the rather late-blooming nationalism of the oll-producing countries but the explosion of demand for energy by the industrialized world. American energy requirements alone are expected to double in a decade; the Washington Gas Light Co. recently said it could not provide gas to any new customers.

There is no evidence that political factors affected the talks on "participation" in Beirut. Yet it is plain that the oil-consuming states are eager to multiply and diversify their sonrces of oil, not only to get into a better supply and bargaining position but to hedge against political crises. Japan, for instance, which imports 90 percent of its oll from the Persian Gulf, is now at the point of closing an immensely costly, and risky, oil pipeline deal with Russla: Japan would build a 4,400-mile pipeline to Russla's Tyumen fleids, taking payment in oil. The quest for new oil fields, and for alternatives to oil, can only intensify as the world's energy bind tightens. The United States imports only 5 percent of the oil it uses from the Middle East; given our growing needs, this figure is bound to grow. American-owned oil companies like Aramco, however, return close to $2 billion annually on our balance of payments. At the moment, the United States may be in a position to weep crocodile tears as the price of oil pald by its industrial competitors in Europe and Japan rises. But inevitably the advantages which American oil interests have enjoyed in the producing countries are going to be trimmed; the process is already weil advanced. Both politically and economically, it will take negotiating skill and an appropriate respect for the complexity of the factors involved.

International Opinion

Britain, China Resume Full Tics

Britain has now caved in completely on all the points which have been holding this dispute in being for many a long day. The Peking position that Talwan is "a province of the People's Republic of China" is acknowledged. The consulate in Talwan is to be closed. Gone by the board is the long-fought-for tenet that the international position of Taiwan was "undetermined."

The legal eagles at the Foreign Office have been swept aside by the political torrents unleashed by President Nixon's new China policy and by last October's vote at the United Nations to admit Peking and expel Talwan. We need not regret their fate in this particular matter too much.

On Reaching a State of Equilibrium

The following are excerpts from "The Limits to Growth," a report by The Club of Rome.

If the present growth trends in world population, industrialization, pollution, food production and resource depletion continue unchanged, the limits to growth on this planet will be reached sometime within the next 100 years. The most probable result will be a rather sudden and uncontrollable decline in both population and industrial capacity.

It is possible to alter these growth trends and to establish a condition of ecological and economic stability that is sustainable far into the future. The state of global equilibrium could be designed so that the basic meterlal needs of each person on earth are satisfied and each person has an equal opportunity to realize his individual buman po-

If the world's people decide to strive for this second outcome rather than the first, the sooner they begin working to attain it, the greater will be their chances

Disagreement

There may be much disagree-ment with the statement that population and capital growth must stop soon. But virtually no one will argue that material growth on this planet can go on forever. At this point in man's history, the choice posed above is still available in aimost every sphere of human activity. Man can etill choose his limits and etop when he pleases by weakening some of the strong pressures that cause capital and population growth, or by instituting counterpressures, or both. Such. counterpressures will probably not be entirely pleasant. They will certainly involve profound changes in the social and economic structures that have been deeply impressed into human culture by centuries of growth. The alternative is to wait until the price of technology becomes more than society can pay, or until the side-effects of technology sup-press growth themselves, or until problems arise that have no technical solutions. At any of those points the choice of limits will be gone. Growth will be stopped by pressures that are not of human choosing, and that may be very much worse than those which society might choose for itself.

Technology can relieve the symptoms of a problem without affecting the underlying causes. Faith in technology as the ultimate solution to all problems can thus divert our attention from the most fundamental problemthe problem of growth in a finite system—and prevent us from tak-ing effective action to solve it.

On the other hand, our intent is certainly not to brand technology as evil or futile or unnecessary. We are technologists ourselves, working in a technological institution. We strongly believe that many of the technological developments mentioned here—recycling, pollution control devices, contraceptives—will be absolutely vital to the future of human society if they are com-bined with deliberate checks in growth. We would deplore an unreasoned rejection of the benefits of technology as strongly as we argue here against an unreasoned acceptance of them. We bave, after much discussion. decided to call the state of constant population and capital hy the term "equilibrium." brium means a state of balance or equality between opposing forces. The opposing forces are those causing population and capital stock to increase thigo desired family size, low birth-control effectiveness, high rate of capital investment) and those causing population and capital stock to decrease flack of food pollution, high rate of depreciation or obsolescence. The word "capital" should be understood to mean service, industrial and agricultural capital combined.

Thus the most basic definition of the state of global equilibrium is that population and capital are essentially stable, with the forces tending to increase or decrease them in a carefully controlled population or capital level can be maintained forever, but that limit is very far away in time if resources are managed wisely and if there is a sufficiently long time horizon in planning. Let us take as a reasonable time horizon the expected lifetime of a child born into the world tomorrow-70 years if proper food and medical care are supplied. Since most people spend a large part of their time and energy raising children, they might choose as a minimum goal that the society left to those children can be maintained for the full span of the children's lives.

If society's time horizon is as long as 70 years, the permissible population and capital levels may not be too different from those existing today. The rates would be considerably different from those of today, however. Any society would undoubtedly prefer that the death rate be low rather than high, since a long, healthy life seems to be a universal human desire. To maintain equilibrium with long life expectancy, the birth rate then must also be low. It would be best, too, if the capital investment and depreciation rates were low, because the lower they are, pollution there will be.

By choosing a fairly long time horizon for its existence, and a long average lifetime as a desirable goal, we have now arrived at a minimum set of requirements for the state of global coulibrium. (1.) The capital plant and the population are constant in size. The birth rate equals the death rate and the capital investment rate equals the depreciation rate. (2.) All input and output rates

-births, deaths, investment, and depreciation-are kept to a mini-(3.) The levels of capital and population and the ratio of the two are set in accordance with the values of the society. They may be deliberately revised and slowly adjusted as the advance of technology creates new options.

No Guarantee

What would life be like in such an equilibrium state? Would innovation be stifled? Would society be locked into the patterns of inequality and injustice we see in the world today? Discussion of these questions must proceed on the basis of mental models for there is no formal model of social conditions in the equilibrium state. No one can predict what sort of institutions mankind might develop under these new conditions. There is, of course, no guarantee that the new society would be much better or even much different from that which exists today. It seems many problems caused by growth may have more energy and ingenuity available for solving other problems. In fact, we believe that the evolution of a society that favors innovation and technological development, a so-ciety based on equality and justice, is far more likely to evolve in a state of global equilibrium than it is in the state of growth steady state of economic and ecological equilibrium may appear easy to grasp, although the reality is so distant from our experience as to require a Copernican revolution of the mind. Translating the idea into deed, though, is a task filled with overwhelming difficulties and complexities. We can talk seriously about where to start only when the message "The Limits to Growth," and its sense of extreme urgency, are accepted by a large body of scientific, political, and popular opinion in many countries. The transition in any case is likely to be painful, and it will make extreme demands on buman ingenuity and determination. As we have mentioned, only the conviction that there is no other avenue to survivai can liberate the moral, intellectual, and creative forces required to initiate this

One Big Gap in Summitry

By C. L. Sulzberger

HONOLULU.—The one gap in summitry that must be filled by President Nixon, most itinerant of American presidents, is the Japanese gap. Nixon met Emperor Hirohito at Auchorage, Alaska, in 1971 when Japan's sovereign stopped off on a flight to Europe. And be conferred with Premier Sato in San Clemente. Calif., last January. But to complete the process in a sense that compares to presiden-tial talks with chiefs of other principal power areas, he must visit Tokyo.

The President bas called at capitals in Western Europe and China and he is going to Moscow soon. The fact that be has never visited Japan as chief executive -although he went there six times earlier—is remarked upon by Japanese.

They are getting used to the ldes that this is no longer a bipolarized world. They see a more complex arrangement in which the major elements are the United States, Russia, China, Western Europe and Japan.

Tokyo Is Anxious

As one of the five principals, already wooed by Moscow and ex-pecting a new relationship with Peking, Tokyo is anxious to reaffirm its American tles by a presidential visit. These ties were strained by Washington's failure to advise Japan of Nixon's impending China trip and of an impending dollar devaluation plus erection of U.S. trade bar-has come to Tokyo while in office and the one visit planned (by Eisenhower) came to grief in 1960. Therefore the Japanese place particular stock in such a trip now. For them it would confirm Japan's rank among new Big. Five groupings, and would also be seen as reassurance that Washington isn't . demoting Japan in favor of China.

Protocol and political problems are, however, difficult. Hirohito told me he would like a state visit by Nixon. Sato echoes this sentiment but says Japanese decorum wants it to be preceded by an imperial journey to the United States. Apart from the Anchorage airport stopover, no Japanese emperor has ever gone

Diplomatic experts sometimes get lost in protocol. Gen. De Gaulle flew to Washington in 1963 to attend President Kennedv's funeral. He had been planning an American journey for 1964 but, when President Johnson revived the idea, French officials contended the general's attendance at the Kennedy obsequies had changed the situation and Johnson must first visit

Whether there will be difficulties about protocol on Hirohito and Nixon is impossible to say. There are also questions of political convenience. Sato, who is responsible for promoting the idea of an exchange, is expected to resign his office before this summer ends. Nixon will be increasingly engaged in U.S. politics

"Later on people criticized me. They said I came from poor peasant stock, and as soon as I entered the big city, I became bureaucratic and acted like a lord."

In 1967, Ma was, as he put it, "brushed aside" as party secretary. He came down to the May 7. school when it was opened in October, 1968. Despite this long stay, be looked healthy for his 52 years, and even seemed quits joily. He wore a wristwetch, which is not all that common in China, and smoked digarcties through a plastic bolder, which is very uncommon. He said he expected to get back to party work soon—though not necessarily as a party secretary.

Woman's Case.

A far different and I think more representative—case involves a woman in her late 30s who had worked in a neighborhood party organization keeping track of local production. Her organization was, as they say in the May? school, "simplified" during the Cultural Revolution.

Her job was eliminated as result. She has been at the May ? school for three years, awaiting reassignment to another post.

I asked her about her family. She said that she had left behind in Peking two children, aged five and 13, and her husband. Her husband worked in a factory and the 13-year-old went to school. The five-year-old had been sent to live at a state nursery.

I asked her if she missed the children. She said: "At first ! missed the five-year-old. But have grown accustomed to the separation. I see the family every two weeks and I know that the officials in the nursery take especially good care of children whose mothers are in the May ? schools."

Correspondingly, fewer students at the University of Illinois are flunking out or being put on academic probation. During the 1964-65 school year, the university reported, 16 percent of the undergraduates were either expelled or put on probation for low grades: last year, just 3.7 percent fell into that category.

These trends reflect the findings of a study of 435 colleges and universities conducted last year by Lercy S. Burwen, director of institutional research at San Francisco State College. Mr. Burwen found that the overall undergraduate grade rise was from 24 in 1960 to 2.56 in 1969 and was accelerating—that is, the rise from 1968 to 1969 was equal to the rise of the previous four years.

college in 1965 scored an average 471 out of 800 points; on the verbal test last year's freshmen got an average of 454.

Although the divergence of SAT scores and college grades may confirm the suspicion of some teachers that grades are going up even though the students are not any smarter, testing experts caution against reading the connection too literally. The college boards ask different questions and test a different knowledge from college examinations and term papers, they point out.

The debate on rising grades turns on the attitudes of teachers, not how smart students are. And it rises from deeply held feelings among the faculty about the new trends in college education and its changing standards and stu-

College students are getting smarter and more serious about their work than they were during the turbulent late 1960s, some university spokesmen said, and pointed to the rising grades as

Age Makes Difference

Some younger teachers replied that grades were outdated, punitive and irrelevant anyway and should be handed out to encourage effort rather than to reward achievement or to compensate for ethnic and social disadvantages. Older professors suggested with dismay that teachers nowadays have lost their nerve and selfconfidence and scramble for approval from their students by handing out high grades, instead of insisting on strict standards of achievement. Curriculum and grading reforms during the last decade have contributed to the rising grades, several college spokesmen suggested. The pass-fail system, for example, was intended to encourage students to take difficult and unfamiliar courses without risking a low grade to bring down their

Instead, what Dean Adele Simmons of Jackson College in Medford, Mass., calls "a discriminating use of the pass-fail system" per-mits stodents to eliminate their lowest grade before it goes on the final record and so bring up their overall average. Other colleges noted the same practice among their students.

He said a network ranging from Mr. Riesman, in a recent in-Sweden, through East and West Germany, to Arab guerrilla camps, terview, also pointed out the trend in colleges away from the trains terrorists and sends them large lecture course, where students are graded by anonymous teaching assistants, toward the more intimate seminar class, back to Turkey. to educators who about trends to education, these explanations only scratch the surface of the deeper issues in America's rapidly changing youth and

For one thing, efforts to broaden racial and economic representation among the students has brought a tendency among teachers to compensate for poorly urepared students. The practice of grading illprepared students more generously in turn drives up the grades given to the other students, an eminent professor remarked.

"You pass them because they work so hard, so what do you do with the bright students who only deserve a 'C' but who did better then the unprepared students? Give them a 'C,' too? No, they end up with 'Bs,' " he said.

Much of the debate about grading reforms in colleges and universities across the country is also an argument over ideologies and life-styles. Mr. Riesman sees an "anti-elitist" tendency among young faculty members-who do most of the grading in collegeto give out high grades as "an anti-elitist attack on the university's attempt to codify human beings. We've gone from the gentleman's 'C' to the antigentleman's 'B minus." Generation Bond

This anti-authoritarianism is felt as a generation bond between the young faculty members and their students, Mr. Riesman he-

The major issue in the debate over grades is whether or not they should be used at all. The passfail for a number of courses, now gaining increasingly wide acceptance, is a limited innovation in this direction. Some student groups and university councils have intermittently recommended the abolition of the "F" for failure

Thomas Kurtz, assistant prolessor of mathematics at the University of Wisconsin at Madison. argued before the faculty senate recently that "F" should be abolished because it "carries with it punitive connotations, connotations of moral judgment that I don't think many of us intend

"The argument against grades is mixed," William Alexander, associate professor of English at the University of Michigan, said. Swedes See Little Progress In Arms-Ban Talks' 10 Years

GENEVA, March 14 (AP).-The Geneva disarmament conference today marked its 10th anniversary with a gloom-filled appraisal of achievements and a new call for a swift ban on all nuclear esting.

Lamenting that "in material terms, our results amount to next nothing." Swedish nelegate Alva Myrdal, one of the few still active participants of the 1961 opening, told the 25-nation meeting that the complete test han is 'the most urgent of our tasks."

She urged the United States and the Soviet Union to match their expected bilateral accord on strategic arms limitation by solving their deadlock over a ban nn underground tests.

Fundamental Measure

"I am not underestimating the importance of a first major agreement expected to come soon from SALT," Mrs. Myrdal sald. But a test ban remains a fundamental measure to curb the nuclear arms race. Only a ban on further testing can stop ... the quest for product improve-ment which is the most destahilizing element in the arms race." Stalemated Talks

Negotiations on an underground test ban, following the 1963 Moscow treaty on tests in the atmosphere, in outer space and under water, have become stalemated over the control issue. The United States is insisting on on-site inspections, but the Soviet tional means. Mrs. Myrdal said the question control should "really not create insurmountable difficul-ties." She asserted that advances in seismology that deter clandestine testing now exclude the verification issue "as an alibi for the refusal to stop testing." Reviewing the last ten years of disarmament efforts, she said she was "incapable of showing much enthusiasm for celebrating today.

"We cannot blind ourselves to the fact that in reality little has been achieved, and that, in reality, ten times more arma-ment has been amassed. In material terms, our results amount to next to nothing."

The Mozcow test ban treaty, she explained, "has turned out to function only as a public health measure," with no effectiveness hamper nevelopment of nuclear weapons." The treaty on halting the spread of nuclear weapons "haz two years after its entry into force, a woefully scant adherence," she added, with most of the nuclear "threshold" r.a-

The third play, "Dialect Determinism," according to Barnes, is a "cogently amusing examination of the black man's determination to find both leader and scapegoat martyr and victim," and the satire here "urban hu: barbed." The least successful playlet is the last. Barnes contends, and the most ambitlous. In "It Has No Choice." a white girl who has had a vacation affair with a black wants to have out, but the man refuses to be pushed off. The scene "doesn't entirely work." Barnes says, "but I presume this black-and-white affair is meant to be symbolic of, or at least related to, our present racial engagement. > The notion that the dramatized novel always fails is as false as it is familiar. "La Dame aux Camélias," the most popular French play of the last hundred was "Uncle Tom's Cabin." which disgorged a lot of lucre from the American public while the English "East Lynne." a stock favorite in both Britain and the Uniled States for generations, was an adapted best seller. Dickens. Thackeray, Balzac, Zola and Michael Arlen have been transferred profitably to the boards. The exception seems to be Dostoevski.

I can't remember a single thoroughly satisfactory dramatization of a major Dostoevski novel. Certainly, there were memorable moments in Nemirovitch-Dantchenko and in Jacques Copeau's versions of "The Brothers Keramazoff," but nelther even faintly conveyed the scope of the original. Dramatizations of "Crime and Punishment," and "The Idiot" bave been plentiful -and there have been operas based upon them-but name just one that succeeded in capturing the dynamic narration of the Russian master.

Dostoevski's shorter fiction has fared better behind the footlights. Alfred Savoir distilled a fair play from "The Eternal Husband." though he, like the others, found himself out of his depth when he sought to fashion "The Idiot" into a vehicle for Ida Rubenstein. The dramatis personae are only shadows voicing the debates of the famous pages and remain resolutely a collection of fantastic marionettes engaged in an extravagant melodrama.

Stavroguine (played by José-Maria Flotats), the principal figure, has become a revolutionary out of sheer idleness and cynica pessimism. Fired with the will to destroy, he spurs his muddleheaded, idealistic followers to their doom as he serves as a leader of a subversive nihilistic chapter. Enigmatic and confusing, he is strongly tinged with romantic features, a Byronio rebel. In drawing him Dostoevski may have been inspired by the weird Raoul Rigault, prefect of police under the Commune. But in him, too, the strong man of our own time—Hitler, Stalin and other self-professed world savers—is clearly prophesied the ruthless tyrant who turns the credulity of the masses to his personal purpose. The timely subject of the novel fascinated Camus, but rather than composing a lahored dramatization of the original, he would have done hetter to borrow its theme for a play of his own.

The Innocent Herb in Absinthe suffered the worst reputation. Its ravages were such in France that a government usually tolerant in such mattere forbade its manufacture. Yet it is based on an innocent enough herb of the genus Artemisia, which would seem incapable of villainy.

Several learned reference books make a valiant effort to derive the name of this genus of herbs and shrubs directly from that of the goddess Artemis, though it requires a little deviousness to so. One attempts to make the derivation pertinent by identifying Artemis only as "goddess of forests and hills," skipping over her more solidly established reputation as goddess of hunting.

The machinery of the derivation is given as "probably irreg-ular from the Greek Artemid plus is." which reminds me of my etymology professor'e deadpan assertion that the town of Middlebury, Mass., derived its name from the word man dropping the an and adding the iddlehury."

Another Possibility

I woold like to offer another explanation: the name probably honore Artemisia, Queen of Carla (who was herself presumably called after the goddess Artemis). Artemisia of Caria is famous for having built, about 350 BC, one of the seven wonders of the ancient world, the tomb of her husband King Mausolus, thus creating the word mausoleum. What is less well known about her is that she was a medical researcher and a botanist, who discovered and named a number of herbs; perhaps Artemisla was among them.

Artemisia are characterized by hitter sap, which tends to keep them out of the kitchen. The chief exception is Artemisa dracusculus, which L tarragon. But many Artemisias go into alcoholic drinks, such as wormwood (Artemisia absinthium), which is, of correct the absinthe producer, or the Alpine "Artemisis of the -aciers." which flavors several oueurs and eaux-de-vie called in France and Italy by one form or another of the word genept. Bitter taste does not preclude the use of herbs in medicine, so the dried flowerheads of several Asiatic species principally from Iran or Turkistan, are used to produce santonin, which expels roundworms from the digestive tract. The species so used are known commercially as Levant wormseed.

Irrelevant Bitterness of taste is also irrelevant to a medico-magical use of Artemisia recommended in the "Petit Albert," a 19th-century manual of white magic. To be able to run fasler and longer than if riding horseback, this authority asserts, it is only necessary to wind around legs strips of skin cut from a young hare into which have been sewed shade-oried Artemisia. In Saintonge, Artemisia cut before sunrise on St. John's Day was considered a powerful protection against the evil eye. These two beliefs applied to the species known popularly as St. John's Flowers, St. John's Crown or "the herb of a hundred flavors," and scientifically as the common Artemisia, Artemisia vulgaris, long used as an anti-Artemisia vulgaris spasmodic. also works its way into amatory

OF all alcoholic drinks, absinthe may be the one which has suffered the worst reputation. Its soner of roast meats, especially goose. Its young leaves are some. times added "discreetly" to sal-

> The Artemisia group, which in general prefers comparatively arid habitats, such as the American Southwest, displays considerable variety. Besides the species mentioned above, it includes sagebrush; beach wormwood and mugwort, which have escaped from cultivation and become weeds; and southernwood, Artemisia abrotanum, which is citronella-not the plant from which the insect repellant is extracted hut a shrub grown in ornamental gardens for its agreeable lemon-camphor odor.

The Hindic eplc poem is considered one of the world's religious classics. Part of a larger epic, the Mahabharata, the Bhagavad Gita attempts to describe what God is and what man should do to reach blm. It is cast in the form of a dialogue between Krishna an incarnation of God. and Arjuna, a warrior.

"It helped, too, that I was familiar with symbols outside the Roman alphabet, so the Sanskrit characters came rather easily."

Ten years after having been tipped off to Sanskrit, Mr. Sargeant not only had learned to read and write the language but by Doubleday in this country also had worked his way through Landman's "Sanskrit Reader," an anthology of progressively more difficult selections of prose violinist, I'm pretty disciplined, and poetry. his attainments, he took a transliterated version of the Bhagavad Gita and translated it back into Sanskrit.

"I had been interested in the Blagavad Gita for many years. but I was never very happy with the various translations of that religious epic into English," Mr. Sargeant went on, "so I decided to do one myself for my intellectual stimulation and, at first, without any thought of publication_"

In the last five years Mr. Sargeant's work has gone through three drafts and some criticism from Dr. J. A. B. Van Bultenen of the University of Chicago. The final version has been hought and Allen & Unwin in Britain, and it is heing composed abroad because American print shops are lacking in Sanskrit fonts.

BETRUT, March 14 (AP).— Eleven oil producing couotries are ready to impose sanctions on any Western oil company which opposes government demands for a 20 percent share of their assets, oil sources reported today.

Provision for sanctions—cutting off the oil flow-was contained in a resolution adopted here at the weekend by a special confcrence of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) to discuss the participation issue, the sources report.

The resolution is to be published March 24, after ratification hy member governments.

The authoritative oil journal The Middle East Economic Survey (MEES) meanwhile reported that the preamble to the resolu-tion mentions that in an attempt to undermine OPEC's solidarity the companies might make participation offers to some countries and not to others.

One official made this point when asked if the administration would act to ease interim currency pressures before the monetary system is reformed:

"Why should we be the first to act when the British, for instance, have to pay a 30 percent premium to buy U.S. stocks?" he replied.

He said this was only one case, adding there was room for general adjustment in foreign control

Other sources said they believed the British authorities, among others, were closely scrutinizing the anomaly of two-directional control policies. Some action to harmonize these controls may well be taken shortly, it is believed.

But New York money market sources make the point that most British portfolio investment in the United States is conducted by exempted investment trusts through offshore dollar borrowings and not through the direct dollar premium route.

U.S. Interest Rates Rising; Easy-Money Policy Fading

DJ:-Short-term U.S. interest rates are rising amio growing signs that the Federal Reserve System has abandoned the aggressively easy money policy it had followed since late last year. Among the major developments were rate markups ranging to 1.4 percentage point on commercial paper issued by finance companies, (now at 4 percent for 90-day paper), increases of 1 8 to percentage point in the quotes on bankers' acceptances now et 4 1/8 to 4 1 2 percent and sharp rises in the yields on Treasury

NEW YORK, March 14 (AP-

Analysts said the sharp rate rises had been prompted chiefly by the failure of the Fed to counteract a growing plach for funds in the banking system.

Eoropean Concern a Factor The inaction was in sharp contrast to early this year, when the Fed aggressively intervened at any signal of money-market tautness and was instrumental in driving short-term rates down-

Recent statistics and current conditions support the idea that the Fed is no longer trying hard to more rapidly expand the credit supply, and that it has stopped trying to bring short-term interest rates down further. The credit supply posture would reflect the feeling that a generous amount is already available to support the desired business upturn, analysts say, while the terest rate stance is made almost inevitable by the extreme European concern that U.S. shortterm rates already are danger-

Moncy Supply Up While credit supplied by the Fed to the commercial banking system has been declining since early January after rising strong-ly through 1971, the money supwhich many analysts consider the most important influence on the economy, finally has started rising rapidly.

After almost no change in the latter half of 1971, this measure of currency and private checking deposit has grown at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of almost 9 percent so far this year, St. Louis Fed figures show—fast enough to revive inflation fears among economists who take the money supply the most seriously.

With that sort of growth under way, some seers say, the Fed rose 5.34 to finish at 934.00. Yesterday's drop amounted to 11.21. Essentially, it was a quiet day in Wall Street as gains of one point or more in Alcoa, Eastman Kodak, Du Pont and Procter & Gamble chiefly accounted for the improvement in the Dow average.

The main excitement of the session was provided by a statistical whopper—a block of 5.245,000 shares of American Motors at a price of 7 1 4. This was the biggest single trade in terms of share size in the 180-year history of the New York Stock Exchange. Kaiser Industries was the seller and a wide number of buyers were involved.

This ruised Big Board volume to 22.37 million shares from yesterday's relatively depressed level of 16.73 million. Without the block of American Motors, volume would have amounted to 17-13 orillion shares.

The International Monetary Market: a major step toward stability in world trade.

Victor Hugo

"There is today a major need for a broad, widely based, active and resilient futures market in currency." Prof. Milton Friedman

You're a multi-national electronics corporation. You've just made a $10 million sale overseas. Your profit on the deal is $300,000. You could wind up losing $150,000.

You're a multi-national oil company. You've just made a $10 million purchase overseas. You could wind up paying $10,450,000.

You're a pretty sophisticated speculator. 6 You keep your eye on the exchange rates. You think the Deutschemark is undervalued. Now you can do something about it.

Of course, the speculator could lose much of his risk capital. The electronics corporation could wind up with a windfall profit of $750,000. The oil company could pay as little as $9,550,000 for its purchase.

The difference is this: of the three examples cited, only the speculator wants that kind of risk. A major corporation does not. The recent agreement to let currencies vary 2.25% above or below official parity has put many international companies in a business they don't want to be in-currency speculation. Changes in currency values interfere with the conduct of dayto-day business and are even more disruptive of long-range planning and pricing.

Speculators—the shock absorbers of futures transactions—have been unable (though certainly not unwilling) to participate. As Professor Milton Friedman has said: "The market needs speculators who are willing to take open positions as well as hedges. The larger the volume of speculative activity, the better the market and the easier it will be for persons involved in foreign trade and investment to hedge at low costs."

There is little doubt that substantial numbers of speculators will be drawn to currency futures. (If a city-dweller, for example, is willing to take the time to study pig crop reports and various other factors affecting frozen pork belly futures, it seems more than likely that he would find a study of the ultimate commodity—money—at least as familiar and understandable.)

In the interest of bringing greater stability to world commerce; in the interest of providing a major marketplace for those who have the financial ability and the desire to pit their judgment against the future; the Chicago Mercantile Exchange has established the International Monetary Market. As one of the largest and most innovative futures markets in the world, the CME is uniquely qualified to do so. Its brand new trading floor complex together with its world-wide electronic communications facilities make it, technologically, the most modern exchange in the world. Yet this technology is backed by more than fifty years of futures trading experience in the futures trading capital of the world.

The older order changeth. Bretton Woods is dead. The time has come for a new idea. The International Monetary Market is born.

Trading begins in mid-April, 1972 in Canadian dollars, Deutschemarks, Swiss francs, British pounds, Japanese yen, Italian lira and Mexican pesos. Interested parties may secure further information by writing to the address below.

Stocks that are Surprising the Skeptics

Is this just the beginning of major gains for issues which the investing public has found most frightening?

CONTROL DATA DIGITAL EQUIPMENT FAIRCHILD CAMERA

LEASCO MARSHALL MEMOREX UNIVERSITY COMPUTING

On the above list of growth stocks which have been under massive public selling pressure since the panic lows of 1970, there is one which has already tripled since KAB first recom-mended it; and this aggressively-oriented research and manage-ment organization now says it may be getting ready to triple

All these issues and others like them have been maligned incessantly by bearish analysts and commentators who apparently have been totally unable to understand them. KAB, which talks from week to week with controversial companies in all the most rophisticated growth industries, has been issuing repeated buying recommendations in all areas represented here whenever another beariah attack has been launched—whether in computer peripherals, data communications, integrated circulty or other breakaway fields including mass housing and cable TV. And in most cases KAB experts—who are available to work directly with your portfolio—still see much higher prices ahead.

Getting the Feeling of a New Bull Market

Every new kull market goes through an early phase in which skeplics protest that depressed growth industries will never resume market leadership. While pessimism prevails, however, informed professionals are at work accumulating bargains in areas where new concepts and new equipment generations are destined to shock the skeptics. If you've been missing early advances such as FAIRCHILD's drive from $19 to $41 or ITPEK's latest swing from $30 to $56, the weekly KAB letter can show you how and why such movements develop and what you should be buying now. Or if you prefer, the KAB growth-management group can work with you directly on a straight performance basis. State your wishes in the coupon below—or phone for faster service:

South brushed aside East'e psychic overcall of North's oneheart opening bid with a double, and West bid two clubs. South then leaped into Blackwood, When his partner chowed two aces, he decided to try for a spade grand Twelve top tricks were in view but South had to search for a 13th. It was clear from the bidding that the club finesse would lose, but there was a chance of developing a heart trick or of maneuvering a squeeze.

West hit on the best opening lead, a diamond. After a major-suit lead South would have had no trouble, since he would have had the entries to develop and cash the fifth heart in the dummy. The diamond lead prematurely removed an important entry from the dummy. South won the first trick with the diamond ace from dummy, drew trumps in three rounds and attacked hearts. The ace king and a ruff revealed that West had begun with four hearts. As he had also bid clubs, it was easy to see that he could be squeezed by the run of trumps, and he was. On the last spade he had to unguard clubs to keep the heart queen, and South made three club tricks and his grand slam. With West guarding hearts and

East guarding diamonds, South did not have to worry about taking a club finesse. He did not even need the club jack-any card in that suit would do. The North-South team gained 750 points and the defense was left with the thought that if, following a famous English example, they had left South to play in one no-trump doubled, he would have gone down seven tricks.

history of poetry, or raise goose pimples on the skm of a faculty wife who is wearing three layers of exegesis. Yet, in "Love in the Dunes," the first of these three long stories, Shirley Kane feels that she must have a lover, that until she does there will be a bare, uncultivated patch in her sensibility. Her husband Max, like so many intellectuals, is not at his hest on a beach. Relating to him at a summer resort is rather like trying to read without sunglasses in the midday glare. Shirley tends to think of him in terms Violet Paget used in her book on empathy in art.
"How out of time to the trees, to the landscape, the people are walking and talking!" Max's heroism, if he has any, tends to show itself in negation—in refusing nature in betraying it with his work, choosing the rustle of papers over the murmur of the waves, the work table over the tableau. He is not a man for all seasons, for "ecstatic identities with the weather." Charlie Krebs, who with his wife, Marlene, is sharing a beach home with Shirley and Max, has not only a bibliography but a long, lean body as well. And he desires Shirley, despite his sexy wife, for reasons that are almost the inverse of Max's. He wants to plunge into her as he plunges into the water. He sees her not as his lifetime companion, sharer of his lucubrations, but as a boliday a vacation from intel-lection. On her side, Shirley wants him to penetrate her like the sun. A character out of a contemporary New York Jewish novel, she is in a D. H. Lawrence mood, a mixture of sex masochism and unfamiliar ineffability. In the end, Shirley compares the two men like texts and chooses the well-thumbed scholarly tome over the handsome limited edition. Like so many of us, she has to contradict herself before she can discover who she is. Her one venture into empiricism has been a disappointing field trip, like an archaeological dig that turned up only a few insignificant shards and priapic cartoons. "How I Spent My Summer Vacation" is a good example of a certain school of literary thinking, one which holds that any situation can be turned into literature if a sufficiently sensitive and intelligent scrutiny is incessantly brought to bear on it. Again we are at the beach, and once more Miss Birstein's characters are finding it a gritty place. Jason, Arthur's 13-vearold son hy a previous marriage, is spending part of his vacation with them, and this inevitably forces everyone into a role. Arthur hopes to regain his son's confidence; Jason is determined to make his father atone for leaving him: Arthur's wife, Janet, sees an opportunity to practice all the child psychology she learned in school.

NO LOVER can live up to the of Arthur and Jason from every possible point of view, one is in clined to abandon them to it. and Janet along with them. She revolves a thought rather like washing machine with too sua a load, and they simply fall to qualify as tragic characters Jason, for example, has in ankles and Arthur cries on For mica tables. Affidavit Signed By Its Player

MILWAUKEE, Merch 14 (AP) -Marquette's basketbeil team. its nnce brilliant season first bruised and then nearly crushed by the tentacies of the pro leagues' s novig men has been given a second chance in its quest for the collegiate title.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association reinstated the seventh-ranked Warriors to tournament play last night ofter player Bob Lackey signed an affidavit stating he had not engaged the services of an agent in represent him in bargaining with the pros.

The NCAA bad asked Lackey to sign the disclaimer before Saturday's Mideast Regional game at Knoxville, Tenn. Lackey was willing to sign, but decided against it when coach Al McGuire suggested he first obtain legal counsel.

Lackey scored 20 points Soturday as the Warriors routed Ohio University, 73-49, in easily their best showing since star center Jim Chones left the team to turn pro, The NCAA announced Sunday it was suspending Marquette from tournanient play, but left open an avenue of appeal whileh Marquette used successfully.

Onward

McGuire said he thought reinstatement meant the NCAA and its eligibility committee "realized we weren't trying to hide anything. Now it's just on to the next crisis for us, I guess." McGuire didn't know it at the time, but the Warriros' first crisis was spowned when Jun McDaniels jumped the American Backetball Arsociation last month and signed with Scattle of the rival National Basketball Association

The ABA, stung, eyed Chones, a 6-foor-11 junior whose widow-ed mother works in a Racine. Wis., restaurant to support her family. When the New York Nets offered an estimated $1.5 million in cash and told Chenes to sign now or it would rescind the offer, Chones signed.

The Lackey incident came on the heels of Charlie Scott, the ABA's leading scorer, quitting the Virginia Squires. Lackey was asked to sign the affidavit in a show of determination by the NCAA to avoid another Howard Forter case. Porter led Villanova to second place in the NCAA tournament forfeit $76,000 in receipts when it was found he had signed a

In Portugal, Jimmy Hagan, once inside-left for Shettield United and England, looms certain to win his second consecutive championship with Benfica, where so many great names have tried and friled.

Hagan, like Buckingham, was out of a job in England when he got appointed, and, in his early weeks, problems of discipline and training seemed likely to unseat him. At West Bromwich, he hed upset his players by insisting that they take off their tracksuit trousers to train in the cold weather, and the were _made of much less stern stuff.

Seaver's Tight Arm Tosses The Mets One More Problem

ST. PETERSBURG, Fle., March right shoulder, which was re-ported improved Sunday, turned stiff egain yesterday and the ace of the New York Mets' staff was immediately scratched from today's exhibition game against the Cincinnati Reds.

The setback for the $120,000-eyear pitcher overshadowed the Mets' other troubles in a springtime of anxiety, including a twopunch fist fight in the coaches' locker room this morning between Tim Foli and Joe Pignatano.

The scuffle grew out of an argument over tickets to a hockey game and was unrelated to anything else that has happened the Mets in four weeks of spring training. But it added another low note to a month of trouble that included Jim Fregosi's fractured thumb, Danny Friselia's aching shoulder and, during the last four days, Seaver's tightening arm.

Thoeni will have three races on his home grounds this week as he tries to catch Henri Du-villard, who leads with 117 points, and Jean-Noël Augert, with 114. Thoeni has 107. Duvillard, a threat in all three disciplines, has only one more downhill this year. Augest and Thorni are no downhill specialists, but they excel in slalems, and there are four more to come. "I fear both Duvillard and Au-gert, because they are shead of me now," Thoeni said. "But to be honest, I think Augert is tha real threat to my title. Duvil-lard is not in great shape. Jean-Noël, on the other hand, is going strong."

The World Cup schedule has one downhill and a giant slalom here and a special sistem in nearby Madonna di Campiglio. Then competitors move to Pra Loup, France, for the last two races of the season.

Augert, however, has a handl-cap in the special slalom, as he has already 90 points in that event. He can add only 35 more points as each skier can only garner a maximum of 135 points in each specialty. In today's downhill trials.

"People say the same thing about Cesar Chavez, that Cesar Chavez is using these poor workers, they really don't want to go in that direction. They want to stay with the owners. That's hogwash. It takes a racist degenerate to make a statement like that." Because black athletes have the "greatest access to the media, financial resources and contacts around the country," Edwards believes it is imperative that the athletes continue to ntilize their positions as a source of power. "Vida Riue wins 23 games end gets right up next to the President for 45 minutes," Edwards noted nf baseball's top left-hander, who, ironically, now is involved in heavy, uncomfortable negotiations with his owner.

"It took the Black Caucus two years to get into the President's office and they were only two blocks away." Edwards says his logic for political participation is that if President Nixon can spend his time thinking about baseball and fcotball, "I can spend my time thinking about the political in-terest of black people.

"This is the direction that things are going to go for the remainder of this decade," he said, summarizing his group's new course, which may lead to a merger with other groups involved in the athletic liberation. "Hopefully, we'll have a tremendous amount of input in terms of the value structure for changing the orientation of sport in this country."

Frazier, Ali Willing to Fight In September in Los Angeles

NEW YORK, March 14 (Reuters),-Heavyweight champion Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali said last night that they are agreeable to a mid-September date for their long-awaited re-

Frazier and Ali and their lawyers, as well as Los Angeles promoter Jack Kent Cooke, discussed the return match in a television interview here last night. Cooke, who co-promoted the first fight in New York and holds the rights to the rematch, plans to stage the September bout in the Los Angeles Forum, which he owns.

Contrary to some reports that his option on the return match expires two years after the first fight, Cooke said he holds the rights "in perpetuity." All's lawyer confirmed

The return-bout agreement epecified each fighter would get a guarantee of $750.000, plus a percentage of the gate. But Frazier's lawyer said Cooke had told him he was pre-pared to offer "substantially more" than that amount. All will reportedly demand $6 million.

Each boxer received $2,500,000 for their 15-round bout-won by Frazier-in Madison Square Garden on March 8, 1971.

This Week's Things

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.-In consulting cles in the National Review de-W the following directory of this week's events, it should be noted that while admissions are free unless otherwise indicated, special credentials may be required in some cases. INFLATION. Prices will again rise steadily throughout this week. For the best view, go to your butcher's cash register. BOMBING

e d low-zititude warcraft will be bombing as usual throughout Indochina all week, weather permitting, in order to win the hearts and minds of the Indochinese people Sporadic hembing will also be held in Northern Ireland in the cause of justice. The world-famous U.S. Corps of Lunatics will telephone bomb threats against airplanes over a wide area.

CHAIRMAN MAO REMINIS-CENCE CEREMONY, As they have dens regolarly since returning from Feking, Fresident Nixon and Henry Kissinger will invite Secre-tary of State William Rogers to the White House and reminisce about the time they saw Chairman Mao. The highlight of the ritual occurs when the President or Kissinger-they take turns et it—winks at the audience and says: "Too had you couldn't have heen there, Bill." The White House, hy invitation only.

CALIFORNIA. California will be open all week with Ronald Reagan in charge and standing for everything that is decent and good and American and rich.

SWINISHNESS. The swinishness season has been open since Christmas and will not end until election day in November. This week's program in most states is scattered. Consult your local paper to see candidates and government officials running hard against poor people and unpopular minority groups.

FUTILITY. A number of rightwing Republican intellectuals will meet at the National Press Club bar during lunch Wednesday to your television set for a glimpse lay plans for a series of arti- of spring life.

ploring Nixon's hetrayal of Chiang Kai-shek.

HOAXES. Several long-run hoaxes will continue throughout the week. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, for one, will continue in his impersonation of Howard R. Hughes, a hoax he has been engaging in ever since Hughes went to Madrid to impersonate Generalissimo Francisco Franco, who had sought safety in Taiwan impersonating Chiang Kai-shek.

UTTER PRUSTRATION. The hest places for viewing absolutely unbearable frustration and its hloody consequences this week will be Manhattan, Brooklyn, the Bronx, Queens, Tokyo and most major airports, government of-fices, mid-city erteries throughout America, dining rooms of private homes as well as their kitchens, parlors and corridors, Newark and the Middle East. * * *

"AIN"T NOBODY HERE BUT US LAW-AND-ORDER FOLKS!" This supero example of the federal farce genre theater has been packing them into Senate hearing rooms since Jack Anderson produced a memo suggesting that there had been dirty pool at the Justice Department. In an uproarious dnet, "Chivalry in Washington," two men sing that women who write memos are "either puts or drunks" At another hight point, senators sit enthralled as Brit Hume tells the committee that Mrs. Beard has told him that Attorney General Mitchell has told her that President Nixon has told him. . . . Need we say more? Go.

FOOTBALL. Believe it or not, there will he no football played anywhere in the United States this week. At least on television.

SPRING, Although spring is not officially due until next week, Nixon will give us a surprise this week by making B flying visit to confer and he photographed with spring. The President hopes to negotiate an agreement under which spring will stop making young American meo's fancles turn to thoughts of love unless their in-tentions are honorable. Watch

The Great Cadonau War

REAL ESTATE TO LET, SHARE, EXCHANGE

By William F. Buckley Jr. GSTAAD, Switzerland.—Gstaad is B sleepy little town that hustles two or three months per year, when people descend on it in great numbers, most of them to ski or to look at the skiers, or to drink with them. Everyone runs into everyone at Cadonau's, which is where one picks up the daily edition of the Internstions! Herald Tribune, paint supplies, scotch tape, stationery—and, occasionally, B hook.

Madame Cadonau's window is a showcase for a few recently published hooks which are there in three languages, available for the occasional tourist in Gstaad who knows how to read. The saga of the past few months has to do with my looking into the showcase to find prominently displayed David Niven's bestseller, "The Moon's B Balloon." Mr. Niven is a local resident who is very highly regarded. It came as something of a hlow to the professional writers in residence when Mr. Niven managed to dash off a superbly written best seller. The comment of the playwright George Axelrod was dead on: "How dare he write so well?

Do I go sbout playing British colonels?" Fortunately, Mr. Niven is not a professionally qualified skier-otherwise he would be intolerable. I felt no resentment et all against the display of his book. But just next to it was another book by a famous local resident. "War, Economics, and Laughter," hy John Kenneth Galbraith. Bad enough, I thought, to pollute this unspoiled Alpine retreat hy displaying a book hy Mr. Galbraith, hut altogether intolerable in the light of the fact that B chapter in it is devoted to the disparagement of a classic nn municipal government written hy a third distinguished writer - in - residence of the area, to wit, me.

Added to this slight was the mysterious nonappearance of my own recently published hook, a lacuna which Madame Cadonau embarrassedly explained on the grounds that the book, though ordered months ago, had not arrived, presumably because of the New York dock strike.

I replied that New York's longshoremen are distinctly my kind of people, and I could not imagine their consenting to load the innocent bottoms of Liberian transports with books by Galhraith, and declining to ease their conscience by supplying them with my own. called New York and had airexpressed six copies to Madame Carionau and then went to China.

I returned to find, in the window, all the old entries, plus B paperback of Mr. Galbraith's 'Ambassador's Journal" I thereupon collected from an old trunk s copy of my anthology of conservative writing, and handed it, wordlessly, to Ma-dame Cadonan, who dutifully shoe-horned it into her feverish

The next day, I saw there a copy of "The New Industrial State"—in German, which is the kind of thing that happens when Galbraith decides to pull rank, I wired New York and got hold of the single extant copy, in German, of a book I had a hand in writing 18 years ago on Sen. McCarthy, which, desiring not to lose it (there were only 67 coples printed), I priced at a level beyond the reach even of the ski set of window "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex," by Dr. Renben, and everything you didn't want to know about sex hy Harold Rohhins. Everyone has been moved ont except of course David Niven, and now the showcase has in it the original doctoral dissertation of Prof. Galbraith, written in 1936, and entitled Economic Reasons Why The Government of South Vietnam Cannot Last Another Fortnight."

That one was hard to beat, but I have written to Buckingham Palace for the original of a letter I dispatched to King George when Mr. Galbraith was

Late last night, a tall, lean man was spotted going into the back door of Madame Cadonau's with a lock of graying hair, so I have today written to Dr. Kissinger to ask him please to make a secret visit to Madame Cadonau, who has for days now refused to move from ber upstairs apartment, and to promise mutual de-escalation, and the repatriation of all American incunabula, as tensions dimin-I believe in taking the initiative, where peace is con-

Court Told Hippies PEOPLE: Held Brando's Son

Following dramatic evidence that his mother, actress Anna Kashfi, had paid a group of hipples to hide him in an out-ofthe-way Mexican fishing camp, Christian Brando, 13, was vesterday returned to the temporary custody, of his father, actor Marlon Brando. The story of the alleged sequestering of the boy was told in a Santa Monica court by private investigator Jay Armes, himself an extraordinary character who has no hands but pilots his own helicopter. Armes told the court that after he was hired by Brando last week when it was reported that Christian was missling, he flew to Mexico and at length spotted the red Volkswagen Christian had last been seen in beside a hippie fishing camp on the shores of the Nancy Reagan Sea of Cortes in Baja California. With armed Mexican police, Armes said, he entered the camp and found Christian, half-maked and suffering from bronchitis, hiding in B tent. With the police holding the six men and two
